

2015-11-19 | Pressemeldung | International | Nachhaltigkeit

Volkswagen Scandal and Wood Heat Technology

In a comment in the biomass magazine John Ackerly, President of the U.S. Alliance for Green Heat., states that the Volkswagen scandal should be a wake-up call to everyone who makes appliances that have to be tested for emissions and efficiency. The new reality is that independent, real-world testing is getting cheaper and more common. Passing a government-mandated test is one thing. Standing up to scrutiny by others who test is another.

Read the full comment:

<http://www.biomassmagazine.com/articles/12487/volkswagen-scandal-and-wood-heat-technology>